Sigma Chapter members attend Travelers Case Competition

November 16, 2015

On October 9, 2015, six Actuarial Science majors and Professor Christopher Moore traveled to Hartford, Connecticut to participate in the Travelers 8th Annual Actuarial Case Competition.

The Travelers Annual Actuarial Case Competition is a unique opportunity for undergraduate actuarial science students to utilize their business acumen, problem solving and mathematical skills in a competitive environment while networking with actuarial professionals.

The team of students spent the morning and early afternoon preparing an auto insurance rating plan, evaluating a potential new line of business (Commercial Property) for their hypothetical company, and researching a selected actuarial/insurance topic (Investment Income).

Teams then presented the results and conclusions of their research and analysis to Travelers management and fielded questions from a panel of judges. Afterward, the team met with an actuary to receive feedback on their performance. Temple's team was commended for their presentation skills and the detail included in their presentation.

We are proud to have had these six outstanding students represent Temple University, The Fox School of Business, and the Sigma Chapter.
